

The Doctor

The name, The Doctor scares people. Nobody knows much about the Doctor. His name is mentioned regularly in Pain but nobody has seen him. He is described as a man who enjoys playing games as long as he wins.

The Doctor plays chess with those he wants to torment, often resulting in death. He doesn't care who he hurts including his family and he will stop at nothing to get what he wants. Angel fascinates and annoys him. He wants her gift to harness, develop and to aid his research. An army of telepaths are under his control and he continuously dabbles in gene manipulation. The assumption is he is telepathic; however, it is not clear in the novels of what he can do. In Pain, he strives to create life after death. In telepathy he plays his game not giving away what he wants.

Quotes:

He was a sick motherf***er, cutting the spinal cord. The Doctor smirked at his use of 'street language.' He was obviously spending too much time conversing with Samuel. (Page 485 - Pain)

The Doctor nodded his head, trying to stifle the grin that was beginning to form across his lips. He knew what was coming next. "Have you met the twins?" he asked. (Page 486 - Pain)

"But they were pawns in the Doctor's eyes that could easily be sacrificed." (Telepathy)
